THE CROSS-CUT

By Courtney Ryley Cooper

to him any longer."

from the Rodaines!"

things."

eagerly.

a card."

along that-"

"You've told Rodaine so?"

"Rodaine? Impossible!"

Harry, too. There'll be no trouble-

"Can they?" Fairchild asked it

"I want to thank you for those flow-fice that you had wired for them.

"It meant more to me to be able to send them." Then Fairchild stared

There?"

with a sudden idea. "Maurice's coming for you at midnight. Why is it

"Why-" the idea had struck her do something to make up for the fact that every cent of father's money was question with no thought of being rude and she answered in the same vein.

"A quarter of a million. That's why

"And is that why you arranged things to buy this mine?" Fairchild knew the answer before it was given.

"I? I arrange-I never thought of

"I felt that from the beginning. An necessary that you be there?"

"With them?"

I'm vice president."

0000000000000000000000

PEARL MOSQUE OF SHAH JEHAN

They-meant a great deal to me."

But she smiled and cut in.

ers. They were beautiful."

CHAPTER XVII-Continued.

Again a moan from the man on the bed, and at last a slight resistance to sting of the batteries. An hour d, two; gradually Harry came to self, to stare about him in a wondering, vacant manner and then to fasten his eyes upon Fairchild. He seemed to be struggling for speech, for nurses of the hospital, to the extent of co-ordination of ideas. Finally, after many minutes-"That's you, Boy?"

"Yes, Harry."

"But where are we?" "We're in a hospital, and you're knocked out. Don't you know where you've been?"

"I don't know anything since I slid down the wall."

Since you what?" But Harry had lapsed into semiisness again. And it was not until late in the night after the rescue, following a few hours of rest forced upon him by the interne, that Fairchild once more could converse with

"It's something I'll 'ave to show you to explain," said Harry. "I can't tell you about it. You know where that little fissure is in the 'anging wall, away back in the stope?"

"Well, that's it. That's where I got

"But what happened before that?" "What didn't 'appen?" asked Harry, with a painful grin. "Everything in the world 'appened. I-but what did the assay show?"

Fairchild reached forth and laid a hand on the brawny one of his part-

"We're rich, Harry," he said, "richer than I ever dreamed we could be. The child's thoughts now, and it was with ore's as good as that of the Silver avidity that he learned every scrap of "The bloody 'ell it is!" Then Harry dropped back on his pillow for a long time and simply grinned at the cell-Somewhat anxious, Fairchild leaned forward, but his partner's eyes their marital plans. were open and smiling. "I'm just letting it sink in!" he announced, and Fairchild was silent, saving his questions until "it" had sunk. Then:

"You were saying something about that fissure?" "But there is other things first. dy moving around in the drift. | See?" But I didn't pay any attention to ityou know. I was busy and all that, Rodaine was not through. And he and you often 'ear noises that sound knew also that the fight against the funny. So I set 'em off-that is, I lit man with the blue-white scar had only adn't any more'n started when I felt myself knocked back into the from the danger of one man-a man chamber. And there was them fuses. All of 'em burning. Well, I managed to pull out the one from the foot wall and stamp it out, but I didn't 'ave time to get at the others. And the only place where there was a chance for me was clear at the end of the champer. Already I was bleeding like a trick hog where a whole 'arf mountain 'ad 'it me on the 'ead, and I didn't know much what I was doing. I fust wanted to get be'ind somethingthat's all I could think of. So I shied crawled back in there, trying to squeeze as far along as I could. And ere's the funny part of it-I kept on "You what?" "Kept on going. I'd always thought tt was just a place where the 'anging wall 'ad slipped, and that it stopped a few feet back. But it don't-it go on. I crawled along it as fast as I could-I was about woozy, anyway-be'ind me. But there wasn't any use for that fissure in the rocks and in going back—the tunnel was caved to. So I kept on. "After a while, I ran into a stream of water that came out of the inside of the 'ill somewhere, and I took a drink. It gave me a bit of strength. And then I kept on some more-until all of a sudden, I slipped and fell, just when I was beginning to see dyelight. And that's all I know. 'Ow long 'ave I been gone?" "Long enough to make me grayheaded," Fairchild answered with a tittle laugh. Then his brow furrowed. "You say you slipped and fell just as you were beginning to see daylight?" "Yes. It looked like it was reflected from below, somewyes." Fairchild nodded.

"Isn't there quite a spring right by Crazy Laura's house?" "Yes; it keeps going all year there's a current and it don't freeze up. It comes out like it was a water fall-and there's a roaring noise be-"Ind It."

"Then that's the explanation, You followed the fissure until it joined the natural tunnel that the spring has made through the hills. And when you reached the waterfall-well, you fell

"But 'ow did I get 'ere?" Briefly Fairchild told him, while

Harry pawed at his still magnificent mustache. Robert continued:

"But the time's not ripe yet, Harry, to spring it. We've got to find out more about Rodaine first and what other tricks he's been up to. And He laughed. we've got to get other evidence than merely our own word. For instance, in this case, you can't remember anything. All the testimony I could give would be unsupported. They'd run me out of town if I even tried to start any such accusation. But one thing's certain: We're on the open road at last, we know who we're fighting and the

I've got to be up early in the morning some tumbling spring. Suddenly, howand get hold of Farrell. Your case comes up at court." "And I'm up in a 'ospital!"

Which fact the court the next morning recognized, on the testimony of way?" the interne, the physician and the day a continuance until the January term the court further recognized was the been knocked out by a flying stonesubstitution of five thousand dollars just like you were? And why-?" In cash for the deeds of the Blue Poppy mine as security for the bailee. voice was negative. "The only thing And with this done, the deeds to his about it was the fact that your father mine safe in his pocket, Fairchild went 'ad a bullet 'ole in 'is' ead." to the bank, placed the papers behind the great steel gates of the safety deposit vault, and then crossed the street | glanced." to the telegraph office. A long message was the result, and a money order to Denver that ran beyond a hundred dollars. The instructions that been a fight-but don't think that I eyes, all the brighter in the splutterwent with it to the biggest florist in town were for the most elaborate If Sissie Larsen attacked 'im with a attention-the mine. Health returned slowly to the big Cornishman; it would be a matter of weeks before he could be the genial. strong giant that he once had represented. And in those weeks Fairchild was constantly beside him.

Nor that there were no other things which were represented in Robert's desires-far from it. Stronger than ever was Anita Richmond in Fairnews regarding her, as brought to him by Mother Howard. Dully he heard that Maurice Rodaine had told friends that the passing of the Judge had caused only a slight postponement in

Finally, back to his normal strength once more, Harry rose from the armchair by the window of the boarding house and turned to Fairchild. "We're going to work tonight," he announced calmly. "When?" Fairchild did not believe After you went to the assayers, I he understood. Harry grinned. "Tofooled around there in the chamber, night. I've taken a notion. Rodaine and I thought I'd just take a flyer and blow up them 'oles that I'd drilled in We'll fool 'im. We'll leave the guards the 'anging wall at the same time that on in the daytime and work at night. I shot the other. So I put in the And what's more, we'll keep a guard powder and fuses, tamped 'em down on at the mouth of the shaft while and then I thinks, thinks I, that there's we're inside, not to let nobody down.

Fairchild agreed. He knew Squint the fuses and I started to run. Well, begun. The cross-cut had brought wealth and the promise of riches to bloeyy-y-y, right in front of me, the Fairchild and Harry for the rest of world turned upside down, and their lives. But it had not freed them who was willing to do anything in the world, it seemed, to achieve his purpose. Harry's suggestion was a good

Well, then Harry ran, to do much as Fairchild had done, to chuckle and laugh and toss the heavy bits of ore his carbide torch, and finally to hurry into the new stope which had been fashloned by the hired miners in Fairchild's employ and stare upward at the heavy vein of riches above him.

"Wouldn't it knock your eyes out?" he exclaimed, beaming. "That vein's certainly five feet wide." "And two hundred dollars to th ton," added Fairchild, laughing. "No wonder Rodaine wanted it."

"I'll sye so!" A long time of con gratulatory celebration, then Harry led the way to the far end of the great cavern. "'Ere it is!" he announced, as he pointed to what seemed to both this period is evidenced in the lotus of them never to be anything more than a ficsure in the rocks. "It's the thing that saved my life."

Fairchild stared into the darkness of the hole in the earth, a narrow crack in the rocks barely large enough to allow a human form to squeeze within.

"You must have made yourself pretty small, Harry,"

"What? When I went through there? Sye, I could 'ave gone through the eye of a needle. There were six charges of dynamite just about to go off be'ind

Again the men chuckled as they looked at the fissure, a natural, usual gal, and, since they were artists and weapons he fights with. And if we're thing in a mine, and often leading, as artisans rather than mechanical work- son considers good enough, only given enough time, we'll whip | this one did, by subterranean breaks | it-it was the one thing that held the him. I'm going home to bed now; and slips to the underground bed of Rodaines off him. And he was dying > ever, Fairchild whirled with a thought. "Harry! I wonder-couldn't it have been possible for my father to have escaped from this mine in the same

"'E must 'ave."

"And that there might not have been any killing connected with Lar- where." in the trial of the case. A thing which sen at all? Why couldn't Larsen have

> "'E might of, Boy." But Harry's leaned forward and pointed to his own the opportunity. I-yes, I'll be there," scar. "It 'it right about 'ere, and

"But the gun? We didn't find any." "'E 'ad it with 'im. It was Sissie Larsen's. No, Boy, there must 'ave mean your father murdered anybody. ing light of the carbide. floral design possible to be sent by ex- gun, then 'e 'ad a right to kill. But press for Judge Richmond's funeral— as I've told you before—there wouldn't minus a card denoting the sender. Fol- 'ave been a chance for 'm to prove 'is lowing this, Fairchild returned to the story with Squint working against help me—women can guess those hospital, only to find Mother Howard 'Im." He ceased and perked his head things." taking his place beside the bed of toward the bottom of the shaft, listen-Harry. One more place called for his ing intently. "Didn't you 'ear something?"

"I thought so. Like a woman's voice."

"Listen-there it is again!" "Mr. Fairchild!"

They ran to the foot of the shaft, and Fairchild cupped his hands and called:

"Who wants me?" "It's me." The voice was plainer low-a voice that Fairchild recognized immediately.

"I'm-I'm under arrest or some thing up here," was added with a laugh. "The guard won't let me come down.

"Walt, and I'll raise the bucket for you. All right, guard!" Then, blinking with surprise, he turned to the staring Harry, "It's Anita Richmond," he whispered.

The pucket was at the top now. A signal from above, and Fairchild lowered it, to extend a hand and to aid the girl to the ground, looking at her with wondering, eager eyes. In the light of the carbide torch, she was the same boyish-appearing little person he had met on the Denver road except that snow had taken the place of dust now upon the whipcord riding habit, and the brown hair which caressed the corners of her eyes was moist with the breath of the blizzard. Some way Fairchild found his voice, lost for moment.

"Are-are you in trouble?" "No." She smiled at him.

"But out on a night like this-in a She shrugged her shoulders

"I walked. Oh," she added, with a smile, "it didn't hurt me any. The wind was pretty stiff-but then I'm "But what's happened-what's gone wrong? Can I help you with anything

Then it was that Harry, with a rol of his blue eyes and a funny waggle of his big shoulders, moved down the drift toward the stope, leaving them alone together. Anita Richmond watched after him with a smile, waiting until he was out of hearing distance. Then she turned seriously, "Mother Howard told me where you were," came quietly. "It was the only chance I had to see you. I-Imaybe I was a little lonely or-or something. But, anyway, I wanted to see you and thank you and-" "Thank me? For what?" "For everything. For that day on the Denver road, and for the night after the Old Times dance when you came to help me. I-I haven't had an easy time. Most of the people I know are afraid and-some of them aren't to be trusted. And-you-well, I knew the Rodaines were your enemies-and I've rather liked you for it." "Thank you. But-" and Fairchild's roice became a bit frigid-"I haven't een able to understand everything. You are engaged to Maurice Rodaine.' "I was, you mean."

"My engagement ended with my father's death," came slowly-and there was a catch in her voice. "He wanted effort was made through a lawyer in

Beautiful Temple at Agra Is Lined

With White and Blue-Veined

Marble.

Among the most beautiful of Shah

Jehan's sculptured monuments is the pearl mosque at Agra. The entrance gateway of red sandstone contrasts effectively with the interior of white and blue-velued marble, says a writer in Asia. An inscription in letters of black marble states that this mosque may be likened to a precious pearl, for no other mosque is similarly lined with marble. The Indian influence upon Mohammedan architecture of petal cap decorating the domes and in the purely Hindu finials, legitimate

Mohammedan mosques bearing instead the simple spire with the star and crescent. The foliated arches come from a Buddhist source, symbolizing the lotus-leaf shaped aura around the body of Gautama. The pointed upper foliation is derived from the shape of the leaf of the bodhi or pipul tree, under which Gautama attained to enlightment and Buddhahood, and is commonly used in Buddhist idolatry to indicate the nimbus around the head. The master builders of Mogul days were chiefly Indians from Ben-men, much of the inspiration of the architecture of this period must be accredited to them.

Joke on Famous Composer. A certain newly rich person with Massenet and said that he had seen his photograph in a paper and had read that he was "a clever planist."

Would M. Massenet play a few pieces at a little party? He would be well paid of course! The world-famous musician was greatly amused, "Certainly!" he replied, "What night?" "Thursday." "Thursday? What a pity! I am engaged on Thursday. But I can give about the highest drifts, taking adthe address of a friend-an excellent planist, who can play all the modern

So saying, Massenet gave the un- blow them back, step for step. No fortunate newly rich the address of-Saint-Saens! Obviously the victim of Anita had guessed Harry's conclu-Massenet's joke had never heard of sions. The nearest mine to the Blue Saint-Saens, for he called on the dis- Poppy was the Silver Queen, situated tinguished composer and was promptly several hundred feet above it in altikicked out. Saint-Saens brooded over the insult for some hours before he saw the joke,

The successful man is the one who makes better what the ordinary per- easy to make conclusions.

Some way I felt differently. I refused. But you said they were going away?" "Yes. They've been holding conferences-father and son-one after another. They're both excited about something. Last night Maurice came to me and told me that it was necessary for them all to go to Chicago, where the head offices would be established, and that I must go with him. I didn't have the strength to fight him then-there wasn't anybody nearby who could help me. So I-I told him I'd go. Then I lay awake all night, trying to think out a plan-and I thought of you."

Denver who hinted you were behind it.

"I'm glad." Fairchild touched her small gloved hand then, and she did slowly.-it was all I could do to help not draw it away. His fingers moved him, and I promised. But-when he slowly under hers. There was no rewent-I felt that my-my duty was sistance. At last his hand closed with over. I don't consider myself bound a tender pressure—only to release her again. For there had come a laugh, shy, embarrassed, almost fearful-and "Not yet. He's coming after me at the plea: midnight. We're to go away some-

"Can we go back where Harry is?

Can I see the strike again?" Obediently Fairchild led the way, "They've made all their plans. I-I beyond the big cavern, through the wondered if you-if you'd be somecross-cut and into the new stope, where around the house-if you'd-" where Harry was picking about with a "I'll be there. I understand." Fairgad, striving to find a soft spot in child had reached out and touched which to sink a drill. He looked over her arm. "I-want to thank you for his shoulder as they entered and grinned broadly. came with a short laugh. "And

"Oh." he exclaimed, "a new miner!" "I wish I were," she answered. "I wish I could help you."

She came a little closer to him then But Harry had turned and was starand looked up at him with trustful ing upward. His eyes had become wide, his head had shot forward, his whole being had become one of strained attention. Once he cocked his head, "Thank you-it seems that I'm always thanking you. I was afraid-I didn't know where to go-to whom to leaped backward. turn. I thought of you. I knew you'd

"Look out!" he exclaimed. "'Urry, look out!"

"But what is it?" "It's coming down! I 'eard it!" Excitedly he pointed above, toward the "Then you've guessed all black vein of lead and silver. "'Urry for that 'ole in the wall-'urry, I tell you!" He ran past them toward the fissure, yelling at Fairchild. "Pick 'er "You knew that too? I didn't send up and come on! I tell you I 'eard the wall moving—it's coming down, and if it does, it'll bust in the 'ole tunnel!" "They told me at the telegraph of-

CHAPTER XVIII

Hardly realizing what he was doing or why he was doing it, Fairchild seized Anita in his arms and, raising her to his breast as though she were a child, rushed out through the crosscut and along the cavern to the fissure, there to find Harry awaiting them.

"Put 'er in first!" said the Cornishman anxiously. "The farther the safer Did you 'ear anything more?"

Fairchild obeyed, shaking his head in a negative to Harry's question, then squeezed into the fissure, edging along beside Anita, while Harry followed. "What's doing, Harry?" "Nothing. That's the funny part of t!" The big Cornishman had crept to the edge of the fissure and had stared for a moment toward the cross-cut leading to the stope. "If it was coming, it ought to 'ave showed up by now. I'm going back. You stay 'ere." A long moment and he was back, almost creeping, and whispering, as he reached the end of the fissure. "Come 'ere-both of you! Come 'ere!" "What is it?"

"Sh-h-h-h-h. Don't talk too loud

We've been blessed with luck already. Come 'ere." He led the way, the man and woman following him. In the stope the Cornishman crawled carefully to the staging and, standing on tiptoes, pressed his ear against the vein above him. Then he withdrew and nodded "That's what it is!" came his annonncement at last. "You can 'ear it!

too-"it isn't. I-I hadn't thought of it. I was too badly scared, I guess. "But what?" "Get up there and lay your ear Everything's been happening so swiftagainst that veln. See if you 'ear anyly since-since you made the strike up thing. And be quiet about it. I'm scared to make a move, for fear

"Yes, they've been simply crazy somebody 'll 'ear me." Fairchild obeyed. From far away, about something. You got my note?" carried by the telegraphy of the earth and there are few conductors that "That was the beginning. The minute Squint Rodaine heard of the strike are better-was the steady pound I thought he would go out of his head. pound, pound of shock after shock as was in the office-I'm vice president it traveled along the hanging wall. of the firm, you know," she added, Fairchild turned, wondering, then with a sarcastic laugh. "They had to reached for Anita.

"You listen," he ordered, as he lifted her to where she could hear. you get anything?"

The girl's eyes shone. "I know what that is," she said quickly. "I've heard that same sort of thing before-when you're on auother level and somebody's working above. Isn't that it, Mr. Harkins?"

Harry nodded. "That's it," came tersely. bending, he reached for a pick and, muffling the sound as best he could between his knees, knocked the head from the handle. Following this, he lifted the piece of hickory thoughtfully and turned to Fairchild. "Get yourself one," he ordered. "Miss Richmond, I guess you'll 'ave to stay 'ere. I don't see 'ow we can do much else with

"But can't I go along-wherever you're going?"

"There's going to be a fight," said Harry quietly. "And I'm going to knock somebody's block off!" "But-I'd rather be there than here

I-I don't have to get in it. And I'd nore money than culture called on M. be scared to death here. I wouldn't if I was along with you two, because I know-" and she said it with almost childish conviction-"that you can whip 'em."

Harry chuckled. 'Come along, then. I've got a 'unch, and I can't sye it now. But it'll come out in the wash. Come along."

They started up the mountain side, skirting the blg gullies and edging vantage of the cover of the pines, and bending against the force of the blizzard, which seemed to threaten to one spoke; instinctively Fairchild and tude and less than a furlong away. And the metal of the Silver Queen and the Blue Poppy, now that the strike had been made, had assayed almost identically the same. It was

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

·ROAD ·

NO ONE ROAD TYPE IS BEST

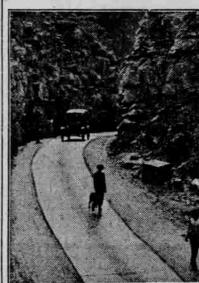

There is Suitable Kind of Highway for Traffic of Every Description Many Considerations.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) No effort has been made to encourage the construction of any particular type of road in the federal-aid projects administered by the bureau of roads of the United States Department of Agriculture. The legal re quirement that the roads shall be "substantial in character" has not been interpreted to mean that only the most expensive types of roads should be built. It has been recognized that the heavy and expensive construction which is necessary in New York, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania is not suitable or warranted for the less exacting traffic of Nevada, Idaho and the Dakotas

There is a suitable type of road for every type of traffic. Granite blocks are best around wharves and freight depots: country thoroughfares need to be better than rural side roads. lightly traveled. A number of other considerations have influenced the choice of type in many cases. It is frequently found that suitable local materials may cost less than better matethen, with a sudden exclamation, he rials imported from a distance; approval of the use of local materials is not infrequently given for the purpose of encouraging local production. In parts of the Far West the entire absence of water along a right of way, and the expense of keeping an adequate supply, often make it necessary to approve the building of a type of construction that can be built without using large quantities of water,

The initial decision as to the type of a particular road is made by the state highway department. The bureau of public roads makes an independent study of the conditions. The most suitable type of road in the judgment of the engineers of the State department and of the bureau of public roads is finally decided upon. earth, sand-clay and gravel roads way Through the Mountains.

which make up 66 per cent of the mileage, have cost only about onefourth of the federal-aid funds used, while the highest types, including cement concrete, brick and bituminous concrete have called for 60 per cent of the money to build 24 per cent of the

PAINT HELPS STEEL BRIDGES

Life of Many Steel Structures is Short ened by infrequent and improper Attention.

The life of many steel highway bridges is materially shortened because of infrequent and improper painting, says the bureau of public roads of the United States Department of Agriculture. Each year a considerable amount of money is spent for the replacement of rusted bridge members that would have remained sound if they had been kept painted; and more serious than the waste of money is the danger to the public due to the weakening of some hidden part which may cause the collapse of the whole bridge. Officials of the bureau urge that an steel bridges be inspected at least once each year and repainted at the first sign of rusting. Normally repainting is required at periods of from two to five years, depending on the climate. A sultable paint should be used, and if there is uncertainty about any paint, information should be requested from the state highway department. It is a mistake to repaint without properly cleaning the metal of all dirt, rust, loose paint, and blisters. Usually the places hardest to reach are the ones that should receive the most at-

Money for Road Paving. Co-operating with the states, the government has approved in the past five years expenditures totaling $229,-000,000 for road paving. This is divided into three classes, concrete, brick and bituminous of which more than 80 per cent has been concrete.

Anyone who is careful to observe the simple rules necessary in doing concrete work can make and place concrete satisfactorily, even though he may have no previous experience.

Highway Transportation.

Highway transportation of freight ncreases from month to month, and good roads should increase as fast as the finances of the community will

Try a fall setting of black locust seedlings or sprouts to grow fence

Concrete cold frames are rot-proof and never need repairs.

Sure Relief FOR INDIGESTION

Try PISO'S

COUGH Prescription

Cuticura Soap Complexions Are Healthy Soap 25c. Ointment 25 and 50c, Talcum 25c

A thought on Yuletide giving

And a few hints on how to fill Father's stocking Another Christmas is rapidly rolling

Another year when you have to sit down and think-and think hardwhat to give Uncle Arthur, Father, Cousin Edward, Grandfather and the

Every man-well, nearly every man —likes nothing better than a good pipe. And the chances are that he will find at least one hanging on the Christmas tree and be tremendously pleased.

Right there is your opportunity to step in and give him something to go with the pipe. Not an ash tray. (He probably has ozens of them.) Not a metal container for safety matches. (He'll never carry the darn thing.) Send him some tobacco. (That's what men usually smoke in pipes.) So to Edge-worth smokers, to the friends of Edgeworth smokers, and to all others who may be interested, we respectfully offer this Christmas suggestion:

a 16-ounce glass jar of Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed.

You'll have to hunt far and wide to find the smoker who won't be tickled to pieces to find a glass jar of Edgeworth beside his Christmas pipe. If he doesn't get a Christmas pipe, he'll enjoy the tobacco just as much in his old pipe.

The 16-ounce jar sells for $1.65 at

If your regular dealer hasn't enough glass jars to supply the Christmas trade, let us play Santa Claus for you. the friends you want to remember, and your personal greetings cards. We'll We'll pack the glass jars in appro-priate Christmas boxes, enclose your cards and send them off in plenty of time to reach your friends before Christmas. Meanwhile, if you are not personally acquainted with Edgeworth, we will be glad to send you free samples—generous helpings both of Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed and Plug

Just send us your name and address on a postal and we will forward the samples promptly. If you will also include the name and address of your tobacco dealer, we will appreciate your Edgeworth is sold in various sizes to suit the needs and means of all purchasers. Both Edgeworth Plug Slice and Ready-Rubbed are packed in small pocket-size packages, in handome tin humidors and in vario

For the Christmas packages or the free samples, address Larus & Brother Company, 44South 21st Street, Rich-,To Retail Tobacco Merchants: If your jobber cannot supply you with

Edgeworth, Larus & Brother Company will gladly send you prepaid by parcel post a one- or two-dozen carton of any size of Edgeworth Plug Slice or Ready-Rubbed for the same price you would now the jobber. Good Opinion of Himself. A neighbor was quite interested i he two brothers next door. She was particularly fond of Bobby, who was

One day she asked him: "How much

"Oh," promptly flashed Bobby, "he's year older, but I'm a year smarter." DYED HER BABY'S COAT, A SKIRT AND CURTAINS WITH "DIAMOND DYES" alkative and unusually bright, older than you is your brother?"

Each package of "Diamond Dyes" concains directions so simple any woman can jve or tint her old, worn, faded things new. Even if she has never dyed before, she can put a new, rich color into shabby skirts, dresses, waists, coats, stockings, sweaters, coverings, draperies, hangings, everything. Buy Diamond Dyes—no other kind—then perfect home dyeing is guaranteed. Just tell your druggist whether the material you wish to dye is wool or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton, or mixed goods. Diamond Dyes never streak, spot, fade or run.—Advertisement.

For matrimonial heartache: A lump of pride dissolved in a glass of com mon sense. Swallow immediately and settle with a kiss. Add a dose of wholesome compliments. Repeat as often as needed .- From Life. Refreshes Weary Eyes When Your Eyes feel Dull and Heavy, use Murine. It In-stantly Relieves that Tired Feeling —Makes them Clear, Bright and Sparkling. Harmless. Sold and Recommended by All Druggiste.

